

SCENE 31 • NUMBER 7

Leve um guarda-chuva

Tuesday, a bright, warm morning. You come down in a T-shirt. Maria stands at the door with an umbrella. "You must take it." Chico doesn't want to go out, and that means rain: the best forecast in town. Rita says Maria is always right. Almost always.

Translation

- Good morning. Where are you going without an umbrella?
- To work. Look what lovely weather! Sun, twenty-five degrees.
- Today you must take an umbrella.
- An umbrella? But there are no clouds! And no wind.
- Chico doesn't want to go outside today. That means rain.
- The cat is a weather forecast?
- The best forecast in town.
- Thanks, but I don't need an umbrella.
- As you like.

Outside, Rita is putting the café tables out on the pavement.

- ▲ Good morning! It's hot today, isn't it?
- Very hot! And Mrs Silva says I need an umbrella.
- ▲ Maria is always right. Well, almost always.
- ▲ And where's Chico? Every morning he sits in my window.
- Today he's at home.
- ▲ Oh. Then take an umbrella.

Chico sits on the windowsill, perfectly dry, looking at the sky.

Half past five. You come home soaked to the skin. Maria is already at the door with a towel.

☐ Mrs Silva... you were right.

☒ I know. Here's a towel.

☐ Thank you. Tomorrow I'm taking the umbrella.

☒ Tomorrow you don't need it. Tomorrow it's sunny.

☐ Who says so?

☒ Chico.

You don't take it. At half past five you come home soaked, and she is at the door with a towel. "I know." Tomorrow: sun, says Chico. Next morning you take the umbrella, and the sun shines. Chico follows you all the way to the office.
