Existence and absence in rooms

Ima can mean there is/are as well as have. Nema says there is no: nema stola, nema kauča, nema stolica. This existence/absence pattern takes the genitive. Do not copy English there is/are into a person-conjugated be phrase.

A feminine noun in -a often has genitive -e: šalica → šalice. Many masculine nouns add -a: stol → stola. Genitive plural often has -a, but common phrases are learnt with their real form.

For a fixed location, u and na take the locative: u stanu, u kupaonici. For entry, learn Mogu li ući? and Uđi • Uđite. These imperative request chunks precede the fuller instructions lesson.

stola	Nema stola.	There is no table.
