Translation

■ Good morning!

○ Morning? It is half past five in the evening!

■ For me that is morning. I am just getting up.

■ Hilde says you are ill. How are you?

- A little better than this morning.
- But I need something for my throat. The pharmacy closes at six.

■ Come on. It takes ten minutes on foot.

Two minutes to six. Herr Sharma already has the keys in his hand.

▲ Good evening. We close at six. What do you need?

○ Good evening, Mr Sharma. I am looking for something for a sore throat.

▲ Here are lozenges. I will explain how to use them.

○ How do I take them?

▲ Let them dissolve slowly in your mouth. The exact amount is in the package leaflet.

○ Could you please show me that? And how much do they cost?

▲ Of course. Here. The pack costs nine euros ninety.

▲ Do you need anything else?

Jonas slips a tiny packet onto the counter.

■ Yes. This here, please.

▲ Here you are. Right, now we are closing.

■ Here, for you. For the night.

- Earplugs? What are those?
- For your ears. Because of my trumpet. Unfortunately I particularly like playing at night.
- Thank you, Jonas. Then I can finally sleep.
- And I can play. Good night!

At the till he buys something too, and gives it to you outside: earplugs. "For the night. Sorry about the trumpet." That night you hear nothing and sleep twelve hours.
