

SCENE 31 • NUMBER 7

Vigyen esernyőt

Tuesday, a bright, warm morning. You come down in a T-shirt. Ilona stands at the door with an umbrella. "You must take it." Cirmi doesn't want to go out, and that means rain: the best forecast in town. Eszter says Ilona is always right. Almost always.

Translation

- Good morning. Where are you going without an umbrella?
- To work. Look what lovely weather! Sun, twenty-five degrees.
- Today you must take an umbrella.

- An umbrella? But there are no clouds! And no wind.
- Cirmi doesn't want to go outside today. That means rain.
- The cat is a weather forecast?
- The best forecast in town.
- Thanks, but I don't need an umbrella.
- As you like.

Outside, Eszter is putting the café tables out on the pavement.

- ▲ Good morning! It's hot today, isn't it?
- Very hot! And Ilona néni says I need an umbrella.
- ▲ Ilona is always right. Well, almost always.
- ▲ And where's Cirmi? Every morning he sits in my window.
- Today he's at home.
- ▲ Oh. Then take an umbrella.

Cirmi sits on the windowsill, perfectly dry, looking at the sky.

Half past five. You come home soaked to the skin. Ilona is already at the door with a towel.

- Ilona néni... you were right.
- I know. Here's a towel.

○ Thank you. Tomorrow I'm taking the umbrella.

■ Tomorrow you don't need it. Tomorrow it's sunny.

○ Who says so?

■ Cirmi.

You don't take it. At half past five you come home soaked, and she is at the door with a towel. "I know." Tomorrow: sun, says Cirmi. Next morning you take the umbrella, and the sun shines. Cirmi follows you all the way to the office.
