Translation

■ Hello. Come in and sit down.

■ What hurts?

You point at your throat. She touches hers, slowly.

○ Here. What is this called in Spanish?

■ The throat. Does your throat hurt?

○ Yes. And my head.

■ Since when?

○ Since Saturday. After Friday's rehearsal, in the rain.

■ Open your mouth. Say ah.

○ Ah.

■ Now breathe deeply. Again, please.

■ Does your back hurt? Or your ears?

○ Not my back. One ear, a little.

She reads a thermometer and raises her eyebrows.

■ Thirty-seven point five. A slightly high temperature.

○ Is it serious?

■ Not at the moment. How much do you sleep?

○ Little. I always hear a trumpet at night.

She sighs. Outside the window, a cloud looks like a trumpet.

■ I know that trumpet.

■ You need to rest. And eat something.

- Lucía says something similar about Michi: he is not naughty, just hungry.
- Yes. My daughter knows a lot.
- Rest and drink enough. Tea, for example.
- And eat something. The pharmacy can help with your throat.
- Thank you, Marta. Can I go to the festival on Saturday?
- Only if you have no fever and feel well. Until then, rest.

She listens, looks, and smiles. "You are not very sick. You are tired. And hungry." It is what Lucía said about the cat on your first morning. Her prescription: sleep, tea, and no trumpet after ten at night. For once you like a prescription.
