Translation

■ Good afternoon. Come in and sit down.

■ Where does it hurt?

You point at your throat. She touches hers, slowly.

○ Here. What is that called in German?

■ The throat. Does your throat hurt?

○ Yes. And I have a headache.

■ Since when?

○ Since Saturday. On Friday the rehearsal was outside. In the rain.

■ Please open your mouth. Say ah.

○ Aaah.

■ And now breathe deeply. Once more, please.

■ Does your back hurt too? Or your ears?

○ Not my back. But one ear hurts a little.

She reads a thermometer and raises her eyebrows.

■ Thirty-seven point five. A slightly raised temperature.

○ Is that serious?

■ Not at the moment. How much do you sleep?

○ Too little. I always hear a trumpet at night.

She sighs. Outside the window, a cloud looks like a trumpet.

■ I know that trumpet.

- Above all you need rest. And something to eat.
- Lotte says something similar about Mikesch: He is not bad, just hungry.
- Yes. My daughter knows her stuff.
- You should rest and drink enough. Tea, for example.
- Have something to eat too. The pharmacy can help you with the sore throat.
- Thank you, Dr Vogel. May I go to the festival on Saturday?
- Only without a fever and with enough energy. Rest until then.

She listens, looks, and smiles. "You are not very sick. You are tired. And hungry." It is what Lotte said about the cat on your first morning. Her prescription: sleep, tea, and no trumpet after ten at night. For once you like a prescription.
