

SCENE 31 · NUMBER 7

Հովանոցը վերցրեք

Tuesday, a bright, warm morning. You come down in a T-shirt. Anahit stands at the door with an umbrella. "You must take it." Mrru doesn't want to go out, and that means rain: the best forecast in town. Mariam says Anahit is always right. Almost always.

Translation

■ Good morning. Take this umbrella.

○ But it is sunny. It is warm.

■ You need to take it.

○ Why?

■ Mrru is not coming outside. So it is going to rain.

☐ I do not need an umbrella. Thank you.

☒ All right. We will see later.

Outside, Mariam is putting the café tables out on the pavement.

☒ Good morning. It is hot today.

☐ Anahit says rain.

☒ She is always right. Almost always.

Half past five. You come home soaked to the skin. Anahit is already at the door with a towel.

It rains in the evening. You come home. Your clothes are wet.

☒ Here is the towel.

☐ Thank you. You are right.

☒ I know.

☐ And tomorrow?

Mrru sits on the windowsill, perfectly dry, looking at the sky.

☒ Sunshine. Mrru is by the door.

You don't take it. At half past five you come home soaked, and she is at the door with a towel. "I know." Tomorrow: sun, says Unnl. Next morning you take the umbrella, and the sun shines. Unnl follows you all the way to the office.
