

SCENE 31 • NUMBER 7

Pasiimkite skėtį

Tuesday, a bright, warm morning. You come down in a T-shirt. Ona stands at the door with an umbrella. "You must take it." Micius doesn't want to go out, and that means rain: the best forecast in town. Rūta says Ona is always right. Almost always.

Tuesday morning, bright and warm. You come down the stairs in a T-shirt. Ona stands at the front door with a big black umbrella.

- Good morning. Where are you going without an umbrella?
- To work. Look what lovely weather! Sun, twenty-five degrees.
- Today you must take an umbrella.
- An umbrella? But there are no clouds! And no wind.
- Micius doesn't want to go outside today. That means rain.
- The cat is a weather forecast?
- The best forecast in town.
- Thanks, but I don't need an umbrella.

She shrugs and leans the umbrella against the door.

- As you like.

Outside, Rūta is putting the café tables out on the pavement.

- ▲ Good morning! It's hot today, isn't it?
- Very hot! And Mrs Ona says I need an umbrella.

▲ Ona is always right. Well, almost always.

▲ And where's Micius? Every morning he sits in my window.

○ Today he's at home.

▲ Oh. Then take an umbrella.

Half past five. You come home soaked to the skin. Ona is already at the door with a towel.

○ Mrs Ona... you were right.

■ I know. Here's a towel.

○ Thank you. Tomorrow I'm taking the umbrella.

■ Tomorrow you don't need it. Tomorrow it's sunny.

○ Who says so?

Micius sits on the windowsill, perfectly dry, looking at the sky.

■ Micius.

You don't take it. At half past five you come home soaked, and she is at the door with a towel. "I know." Tomorrow: sun, says Micius. Next morning you take the umbrella, and the sun shines. Micius follows you all the way to the office.
