Translation

■ Good morning. My report for Saturday. Read it. Just call me Tom.

○ A report? About the festival?

■ Yes. Minute by minute. Listen.

■ Twenty hundred: the concert began. Twenty fourteen: the lights went out. Twenty fifteen: something fell.

○ What fell?

■ I don't know. Twenty sixteen: I screamed.

○ Why?

■ Something warm touched my leg. In the dark.

○ Milo?

■ Perhaps. I saw nothing.

■ Twenty twenty: the lights came on. End of report.

○ What about afterwards?

■ I went home. At half past eight.

○ Really? Everyone saw you dance. Anne too.

He says it very fast.

- I did not dance. It isn't true.

The last line of the report is crossed out, but you can still read it.

- What about the last line? Twenty twenty-five: I danced.

He goes red, and then he smiles.

- A mistake.

- A mistake?

- All right. A lovely mistake.

"Everybody says you danced." "I did not dance." The last line of the report is crossed out, but you can still read it: "20:25: I danced."
